THE LOST SPECTACLES.

What Happened When the Old Gentleman Tried to Find Them.

A man from "up state" who was to New York City on business was taken by a neighbor whom he was visiting to dine at a Broadway restaurant the evening of his arrival. The next day he said to the neighbor man:

"Where is that restaurant we dined at last night? I left my spectacles there, I'm pretty sure. I've got another pair with me, but I don't want to lose the others."

"It's stop in and get them for you on my way down town," replied the neighbor.

He went to the restaurant, explained the circumstances and received a pair of gold rimmed spectacles that had been left on a table the previous evening. On his return home in the afternoon he handed them to his wife.

"Where in thunder did you get those?" inquired the elder man. "I was going down Broadway today and requested the place we dined at—at least I thought I did. Anyway I went in and asked if I left my spectacles last night, and they gave me this pair."

He produced another pair of gold rimmed spectacles.

Upon the uncle describing the restaurant where he had retrieved the glasses the nephew assured him it was several blocks from the one they had patronized the day before. While the two were discussing the situation the postman delivered a package to the uncle. It contained a pair of gold rimmed spectacles, with a note from his wife saying that she had found them on his writing desk at home and was sending them to New York in the event that he might use them.—New York Herald.

MOROCCO CITY.

Magnificent in Its Site and in Its Historic Ruins.

Morocco city, the capital of the southern half of the Moroccan kingdom, is a far more interesting city than Fez. Architecturally its monuments, including the famous Kutubia tower, the contrast of the Giralda in Seville; the famous mosque of Moulay Abdallah and a hundred other ruined or semi-ruined edifices surviving from the days when the city had 700,000 inhabitants and was one of the great capitals of Islam, are the most considerable and magnificent in Morocco. Equally beautiful is the site of this city in the upper valley of the Tensift river, surrounded in a half circle by the great wall of the great Atlas mountains, whose snow-capped peaks are seen beyond a foreground of large farms and fertile fields.

A city far less given over to war, with a population less ferocious, less fanatical than that of Fez or Mequinez, Morocco city has been much more frequently visited by European tourists. Geographically Morocco city is the real gateway to the Sahara. By the Gharb pass one road climbs over the Atlas mountains to Tadla, and the caravan route continues to Timbuctu. A second road descends to the Draa, crossing the Atlas chain, while a third leads to Tadmort and the sea country. Close communication with the south has left its mark upon the people, who are drier and show more intensity the features of African blood than the Berbers and Arabs of the north—London Standard.

Queen Ants.

The queen ant has apparently not had justice done to her by naturalists. Dr. W. M. Wheeler's view is that in comparison with the queen bee the queen ant is far the more admirable creature. In many important respects they are diametrically opposite. The queen bee is it is a perfect example of a delicate creature, unable to nourish either herself or her young to visit flowers, to build combs and fill them with honey. With the queen ant quite the reverse is the case. She is built to be a perfect scavenger and omnivorous of her species, and the workers suffer from lameness and retarded development. The queen ant is a very industrious and intelligent worker. She forms an exceedingly interesting subject for study—London Globe.

Old Signs.

Placed at a moving picture show: "Young children must save pennies in a urinal's shop window." "Burning attentions patrons will be shaved in the back." In a tailor's shop: "We dye for others. Why not let us dye for you?" In a costume store: "Come here to look better on your legs than on our heads."

A sitewoman has a place next door to a restaurant. The former having put up a placard: "Inventory of all kind plates," the restaurant keeper followed with this: "Orders and little neck cases placed."—Boston Transcript.

Defying the Sun.

"Who did you come out downtown to buy this when you could have bought it from your neighbor?" "The exhausted me credit with him, and if I went in there and paid cash for something that I have money and start to do me."—Detroit Free Press.

Just to Cheer.

Young Hub: "There's no need of further rain. The way that come along finds me joining." "Young Wilco, Oh, George, George, don't! Young Hub: In the church of victory—London Tit-Bits.

People who never have any time are the people who do the least.—Lichtenberg.
